

Alexander H. Revell of Chicago is shown addressing a group of American and French citizens, who have just placed a wreath on the Lafayette Statue in Paris. The statue is the gift to France of American school children. Underwood & Underwood.

This new Fokker monoplane, which recently flew successfully with five passengers at the aviation field near Hempstead, L. I., is the first of its type to be seen in this country. The wings are two feet thick and are high above the body. Underwood & Underwood.

Down comes the Prussian eagle and up goes Old Glory on the new house of the Army and Navy Club of America at No. 112 West Fifty-ninth street, New York. The building was formerly the home of the German Club.

Miss Katherine Sutherland, daughter of Senator and Mrs. Howard Sutherland of Elkins, W. Va., who is a popular member of Washington society. (c) Harris & Ewing.

Miss Julia Berwind of New York, photographed at Newport. A distinctive feature of her costume is the fashionable harem veil.

(c) Keystone View Co.

Above—Two fashionable parasols photographed at the Auteuil race course. That at the left is adorned with red cherries and sweet pea blossoms. The one at the right is of burnt orange silk, with conventional designs painted in green. Underwood

Rutherford Hatch, little nephew of Mrs. William K. Vanderbilt, and his cycle auto, which he drives about the grounds of the Vanderbilt house at Ville d'Avray, Paris. (c) Kadel & Herbert.

In circle—Mrs. Y. Takagi, wife of the second son of Baron Kanda of the Japanese House of Peers, who is now in the United States. Her husband is a professor of the Imperial University of Tokio. (c) Harris & Ewing.

Parisian designers do not neglect fashions for children in deciding what we must wear next. This little girl is wearing a frock of old rose crepe georgette, with bonnet of the same material. Underwood & Underwood.